His children, Misses Kathleen and Jeanie, who were at school in Alabama, and Mr. Robert L. Oliver, of the University of Mississippi, were called home on account of their father's condition.

The rain this week was fortunate and timely for those who have oats but hard luck for the alfalfa growers, nearly all of whom were cutting their first crop. Maj. Boyd had about half of a 120 acre field, that was as fine as a crow ever flew over, on the ground, and his loss will be considerable.

Recognized as an Artist.

The following excerpt from the West Point Times-Herald, with reference to the North Mississippi Field Day contest in music, will no doubt be of interest to the readers of the BEACON, as it relates to a Noxubee county boy, Creighton Allen, a pupil of Miss Edna Bush.

It is pleasing to note that he is appreciated elsewhere, as well as in his own county:

There was another youthful performer on the program, Creighton Allen, of Macon, who because of the fact that he didn't wear ribbons and fluffy ruffles was ruled ineligible to contest in music. Young Mr. Allen's, to my mind, little short of a genius. His number, Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2, is in itself a test of great skill, and he displayed in the rendition of this number a degree of musicianship remarkable in one of his age. We predict for Mr. Allen a wonderful future, and fear the girls must look to their laurels another year, when the ruling has been changed and boys are allowed to contest in music, if they would not have this brilliant young pianist capture the prize.

An Imposition.

There is much truth in what the Port Gibson Reveille says here:

The Reveille has for some time noted the thoughtless way in which the public imposes on the local merchants. In town it is a common practice for a lady to step into a store and order a five cent purchase sent to her home, although she may be on her way home at the time. There is an element of selfishness in this which is inexcusable. The merchant, for fear of offending a customer, cannot refuse. Another practice, which is even more reprehensible, is for a person, who is not a regular customer, to have small purchases charged and then compel the merchant to send repeatedly for the money. Merchants cannot be as independent in matters of this kind as formerly. Business is depressed everywhere, and they cannot afford to offend. The same people who so glibly ask credit at home send their cash to foreign mail order houses, of which they never dream of asking an accommodation.
